The following was found on the former homeplace of George H. Ingram by his granddaughter Mrs. Bertha Amacher, R. R. 1, Box 234, Marshall, Illinois. Mrs. Amacher said she had no idea of why she took the urge to visit her grandfather's homeplace. The house and buildings are gone but the old silver poplars are still there with many sprouts and brush in the former yard. She walked over to the silver poplars where the swing was when she was a child --- in kicking through the leaves she found a marble top from an antique chest of drawers or dresser among the many sprouts. She took it home and after cleaning it found this carved on the back of the marble slab.

J. I. B	1787	Tenn.	Died 1850	Ky. (James Ingram as listed in the bible record)
Susannah D	1846
Mary A.	1856
Nancy J.	1873
Amos	1865
Eli	1858

Dated 1876

I failed to state the homeplace of George H. Ingram was in Jackson Township, Effingham County, Illinois. Mrs. Amacher thought that it was possible her grandfather had carved these names and dates to place the stone at the Freamington Cemetery where part of the Ingrams are buried. Mrs. Amacher brought the marble slab to me and I photographed it. Copy of photograph enclosed.
